829 assistant said that he just did it, and that it was a revelation to him. They simply do not think in such diagrammatic terms.

769 186 The ancestor cult is strong here and there are many stories about it, but it is not used to glorify the place. In fact, there is no real pride as such. They are simply satisfied as they know nothing else. There is no feeling of inferiority concerning the status of the village.

178 There has been very little change here in regard to the expanding horizons of social and economic contact.

721 578 178 The old wars and head-hunting continued until recently. Wars seem to have been caused mostly over border disputes, so far as they can remember. Heads were taken as a sign of victory. But I got very little regarding a real head-hunting cult. They said that the heads were placed on the borders, evidently on the borders over which the war had been fought. [789] [246] They said voluntarily that they ate the hearts of enemies in order to increase their magic power. They are quite clear and vivid about this. The hearts were removed through an incision in the back under the shoulder blade. The main enemies were Nggobe and Rodja, but there is no hostility now. More seldom, war was waged against the Lio folk. Spears and [411] guns were used, and formerly bows. Bows were used especially by the Nggobe folk. Circular shields were made of buffalo hide and wood. There were alliances of mutual aid too. For example, Rewarangga (Worowai) and Odja (Roworeke) were in such an arrangement. Also, they [634] went to war for the Ende radja who paid wages for this.

721 634 The radja bitjara (a post no longer present in Ende; he was a kind of minister of foreign relations) (and he was able to talk all lan-

Little meat is

262 eaten, and this is done only during feasts. There are some eggs. They do not eat much fish, because they must purchase them. They do buy some food from the local store (never any canned food, because this is too expensive), for example, rice and salt. They do not grow [249] any tobacco.

434 To get the small amount of money they need to buy in the toko, they sell coconuts and anything else they may have, which is usually quite little. Fl. 5.00 in cash is a lot of money for a man here.

264 The people here eat three times a day, a little in the morning, and equally heavy noon and evening meals.

262 574 They like dog meat and also horse meat, but these, like pig and goat, are only eaten at the time of a feast. They say that the main feasts are funeral ones. They also say that the people here have no decided preference and will gladly eat any kind of meat. They [266] say they have no memory of cannibalism except for the eating of the hearts of enemies for 224 bravery in warfare. They rarely hunt. If they 262 do they use a bow and are lucky to get monkeys 624 or pigs. There are no deer here. There is a clear case for meat hunger here, and the only material gain of being a mosa laki is that you [465] are always given a piece of meat when an animal [171] is killed. This is like the Toradja pattern, and shows how much of a luxury meat really is. It is the "government man's salary."

436 178 443 Formerly there was no money and there were no toko. Of course there may have been a few gold pieces, but they were really sacred objects. Today they have little cash.

727 was then that Keweluk said it was taboo to kill
●266 (to kill women only evidently?). Maybe Vatter[1] has a version? Anyway, he did admit that when an enemy was captured in war, although they didn't kill him in the korke (he was a bit shocked at the idea), they would kill him outside the kampong. His father did this, which was quite decent after all!

754 [266] He insists that there was no cannibalism at all, except that formerly (and even today?) the suwanggi did it. They were and are evidently the devils here. They do the things that other people wouldn't. I wonder if perhaps they are the scapegoats for past practices. That is, they say that their ancestors never did such things, only the suwanggi did them. But, note that there were plenty of suwanggi. Roy's father had to kill fourteen in one day in Leloba alone! There is something fishy here. Either he won't tell everything, or else he has forgotten, or else I am really wrong to suspect him.

681 684 The death punishment was given only to suwanggi (again the devils). It was also given in cases of adultery if the offenders were caught red handed.

115 124 Thus my work in Leloba--Wailolong ended. Roy is a fine old fellow. His only requests were to ride with me if I happened to be going the "same" way," and to take his relatives and family along. He also wanted some photographs, and I will send him a photograph of me. And a copy of my book. I will also send him some medicine for asthma. How different he is from the begging and crafty Endenese.

Roy probably won't live much longer. He is a dramatic figure.

He, more than anyone else, probably, killed off paganism here. But he retains the tolerance and respect for his ancestors, and a knowledge of and pride in the legends and old things.

167 men to leave, as the tax is on each household

486 and thus the radja would lose income if they emigrated.

● 266 There was head-hunting here before. They
681 say that the only cannibalism was the eating
754 of the hearts of enemies in order to gain additional strength. There was no human sacrifice, they say, but they have heard of the Lio stuff (and I checked with Arriens and noted that de Bruine[2] in a report on Lio did not list this as among the crimes of the executed Radja of Lio--whose alias was Pius!--but Arriens says that he did it anyway). The only way a person could be given the death punishment was to be proven a suwanggi.

778 More about the tubu musu. They say that 831 "musu" means "two become one." If so, this is 178 perfect, and indeed the tubu musu is similar to the linggam-yoni. Indeed, they say that it consists of an upright stone, less than a meter high, standing on a flat one. "Tubu" they say means "stone," but I note that Arndt gives it an "obscene" meaning (or is it the musu part that is obscene? check Arndt's Lio dictionary).

They have a rather vague idea that this tubu musu may represent male and female. And it can have children. Thus it is like many such stone-bearing stones in Indonesia, including the stones of Larantuka and some on Ambon. I asked if the tubu musu still had children, and this is beautiful, "no more." It is like Roy saying that the familiars of his father appear no more (but they are there and he could call them: "I can call the spirits from there, etc." "Yes, but will they come?") He has no doubt that they would come. I should have asked if the stones still could have children. Anyway, both they and Roy are completely serious about what used to happen. There are no more rites held at the tubu musu, but plenty were held formerly. [Analyst]

721 kor, e.g., Ruteng and Tjibal. But Rahong never
614 resisted Todo and Pongkor. The Dutch fought
578 here (near the pemali grove along the road).
The panglima prang who led this fight is still living.

Va'u Veol had no traditional enemy, but might join in and help on one side or the other in a war.

There were many wars between the dalu that these kampongs entered. In other regions there were plenty of wars between va'u ("non-dalu wars") but there was not much of this here. These were caused because of borders, molesting fellows, etc. Dalu wars were over borders mainly, but might be for other reasons. The only big wars here were between the dalu. And each kampong had to send just about all of its adult men to fight in these dalu wars.

411 The weapons used consisted of spears, long knives, and shields. They did not use the bow until a few came in very recently. They had no blowguns, but recently a few have come in for hunting birds, although they use no poison darts. Shields were round or rectangular, always of rattan. Helmets were also made of [714] rattan. Their war clothes were fancy. Feathers were placed on the helmets.

266 There was no head-hunting, but, for revenge,
721 they drank a little blood. However, there was no war cannibalism. (Note the many things which are lacking in Manggarai which are usually found elsewhere in Indonesia.)

721 Still, even now from time to time there comes a rumor that men are coming who will chop off their heads. These people are rumored to be coming from outside. It looks like the left-overs of a memory of an old head-hunting experience, perhaps felt from the outside.

[608] There are no traditional alliances between
721 clans or kampongs of the pela sort. But there

538 but many are still remembered. I get the idea that the decline here is not so great as in many other areas.

484 There is practically no desire here yet to go to places which are "happier."

721 There was no head-hunting here at any time,
●266 nor was there any cannibalism, although they did drink blood for revenge pleasure in war. There was no human sacrifice and no torture.

681 The death punishment was given for murder, a slave having sex relations with a kraeng woman, primary incest (but more distant incest was punished by a purifying rite only). The way the death punishment was carried out here and in Pongkor was to throw the victim down into a river from a high point.

411 Note: To kill a beast the people here use
231 a spear or a long knife. It is nearly always the latter.

778 The tjompang tree may be only either waringin
824 or dadap.

515 I see plenty of lice-plucking here. The pretty wife of the head guru I saw plucking the head of another woman. And I see this all over. And here, judging by the smell, they seldom bathe. I see no bathing places. Toilets are evidently holes in the ground enclosed by a screen. I don't remember seeing lice-plucking in Makassar or Buginese areas, but perhaps they do it too. I also do not remember seeing it in Ambon. The Toradja certainly do it. Note that the Endenese and people in Larantuka bathe. The Toradja don't. I think it is probably mountain people (especially the dirty Ngada) who do not bathe and also who have more lice. In this regard, note the Manggarai Ngada, Toradja, and Batak. The Minangkabau, although living in the mountains, bathe (a sign of former coastal life?).

124 Thus ended the Manggarai work, and the as-
